

Derivative Work #0

There is one work (file), and it is derived from another work (in this case, version 1.0). Typically (not always), this derivative work is made by the same author as the original work and is simply the same software application with additional features, bug fixes or other enhancements.